

ZCSP Report – Buildings

WORK IN PROGRESS - This document may be incomplete and not peer reviewed.

Comments and corrections are welcome.

The benefits of low carbon heat networks

Heat networks are not new.

Many 1950's and 60's public sector housing developments had district heating systems as do many large hospital sites.

What is a heat network, or an energy network?

In summary it's a group of buildings served with heat, and sometimes electricity and cooling, from a distribution system with centralised generation and metered supplies to each building.

